Agura Waterfalls. Every name in the Caucasus has a story behind it told by the locals, and Agursky Waterfalls is no exception. Once upon a time, a local beauty Agura was bringing water to a cliff to quench her beloved's thirst who had been chained there for an unknown offense. But one day the girl was followed, and she was punished for her deed by being thrown into the abyss. But even after her death, the loyal Agura did not stop bringing water to her beloved -she turned into a river, which now runs down the mountain gorge. To this day, the small Agura River flows at the foot of the Eagle Cliffs, creating strikingly beautiful waterfalls and creeks along the way.
